

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

[0027] An embodiment for modifying the contents of a revision identification register includes a revision identification register that is both readable and writable (the contents of the revision identification register are modifiable). A revision identification modification bit is also included. The contents of the revision identification register are only modifiable when the revision identification modification bit is set to indicate that writes to the revision identification register will be accepted.